On August 11 we're releasing our Bigfoot... movie

BIG FUR is a quirky look into the world of taxidermy and Bigfoot believers. It's also a wild love story. The documentary streams next month on iTunes, Amazon, and other platforms.

Eccentric world champion taxidermist Ken Walker couldn't find Bigfoot, so he made one. That's the premise behind BIG FUR, a hilarious and compelling feature documentary that premiered at Slamdance in January.

"We'd been invited to several other festivals, and planned to take 'Patty' — the 8' Bigfoot recreation star of the movie — on tour. But with COVID-19 surging, Wedge Films and our distributor, 1091 Pictures, felt it was safer for everyone to move the streaming release up," says Kansas City-based filmmaker Dan Wayne.

Dan followed Ken Walker — a superstar in the newly hip taxidermy world — for three years as he meticulously researched and recreated a Bigfoot, based on a frame-by-frame analysis of the iconic 1967 film clip.

In the film, Walker brings his Bigfoot recreation to the World Taxidermy Championship in Springfield, MO. He'd love to win Best in Show, but his real wish is that putting Patty on display will prompt some hunter to open his freezer and pull out the proof Bigfoot is real. Instead, it's Walker's love life that gets thawed out, and it proves to be the one thing he can't preserve.

Viewers who want to prove the existence of Bigfoot will need hiking boots and lots of patience, but anyone who wants to watch BIG FUR can stream it from iTunes, Amazon, and other platforms beginning August 11.

Make sure to watch for this laugh-out-loud portrait of an artist in search of true love — or the hairy, 800-pound validation of his life's quest. Ultimately, it's a call to preserve the last wilderness. Because when there is no mystery left in the deep, dark forest, we'll have lost more than Bigfoot.
